Stockholm, December 9, O. S.

HIS Excellency Count Charles Gyllenborg, Senator and Preſident of the Chancery of Sweden, who has been in a very weak and languiſhing State of Health, for this Twelve-month paſt, died here, this Day at Noon, in the 65th Year of his Age.

From the Camp of the Allied Army near Cannes in Provence, Dec. 12. General Brown having ſent ſeveral large Detachments from his Camp before Antibes, to forage the Country, and raiſe Contributions, Marſhal Belleiſle has thought fit to abandon the ſtrong Camp which he had taken near Tournon; and after having broken down three Stone Bridges, and burnt his Magazines upon the Ciagne, has retreated as far as Draguignan and Frejuls; upon which, General Brown advanced with his Army to Cannes on the 10th Inſtant, leaving Count Petazzi with 2000 Men to blockade Antibes, till the Cannon ſhould arrive which are to be employed in the Siege of that Town.

Nice, Dec. 16, N. S. General Brown has appointed three Detachments to advance beyond the Ciagne. The firſt, under the Command of M. Macguire, conſiſting of 4000 Men, to diſlodge the Enemy from Draguignan. The ſecond, under the Command of Marquis d'Ormea, of five Battalions, marches towards Caſtellane, Entrevaux, Guillaume, and thoſe Parts. And the third, under the Command of Count Odonalde, of 4000 Men, marches the 16th towards Frejus. Theſe three Corps conſiſt of Troops of the two Crowns, and are to levy Contributions in their reſpective Diſtricts, and to ſend Subſiſtance to the Magazines, which are to be eſtabliſhed at Grace, where the Head Quarters will ſoon be fixed. Upon the 14th Count Brown made a Deſcent into the Iſle of St. Marguerite with 150 Irregulars, and the ſame Number of Volunteers of the two Nations under the Command of Count Galean, Aid de Camp to the King of Sardinia, and Mr. Brown, an Officer of his Britannick Majeſty's Troops at Mahon, and a Volunteer in this Expedition. Theſe Troops landed happily, having received but one Fire from the Enemy. The Deſcent was ſupported by four Pieces of Cannon poſted upon the Point of the Continent, which faces St. Marguerite, and by an Engliſh Bomb Veſſel named the Carſcaſs, commanded by Captain Jeremy, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Skill in Firing. Upon the 15th a great many Gunſhot were fired between the Troops which had landed and the Enemy in the Iſland, without any conſiderable Loſs on either Side. The Auſtrians only wait for Cannon, in order to batter the Town in Form, which, according to all Appearances, cannot hold out above two or three Days.

Vienna, Dec. 21, N. S. By Letters from Buda of the 17th Inſtant, N. S. there is Advice of the Arrival there of his Excellency Mr. Porter, his Britannick Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the Port. The Prince d'Elbeuf, a Prince of the Houſe of Lorrain, is arrived here to make a Viſit to the Emperor. Advice came Yeſterday of the Loſs of Genoa; the Particulars are not yet known. In the mean while, all the Imperial Troops in Lombardy are in full March towards that Capital, as well to recover it, as to be at Hand to reinforce General Brown afterwards in Provence, and to puſh the Operations there with the greateſt Vigour. Count Windiſgratz, formerly Ambaſſador at the Hague, and at the Congreſs of Cambray, and late Stadthalter of this Town, was found dead in his Bed on the 19th Inſtant, N. S. in the Morning.

Vienna, Dec. 24, N. S. By Letters from Conſtantinople of the 19th paſt, O. S. there is Advice, that the Day before the Captain Baſhaw, or High Admiral, was depoſed; and that the Grand Signor's Maſter of the Horſe ſucceeds him in that Charge.

Aix in Provence, Dec. 22, N. S. The Enemy, who arrived upon the 16th at Draguignan, from which Place they have diſlodged M. de Craſſolles, who was poſted there with a large Body of Men, are advanced by Lorgues to Brignolles. They have divided their Army into two Bodies, one of which is marching towards Riez, and the other towards Toulon. Our Army, which was at Luc, is turned off to Puget and Cuers at the Approach of the Enemy.

Hague, Dec. 30, N. S. The Letters from Italy, by the two laſt Poſts, continue full of Accounts of the late Tumult in the City of Genoa. The Particulars of this Event, either as to its Riſe, or Progreſs, are not yet diſtinctly known; but, in general, it is ſaid, that in the ſeveral Skirmiſhes, which laſted nine Days, between the Imperial Troops and the Inhabitants, the firſt had loſt about 500 Men, and the laſt above 2000: That the Imperialiſts, being at laſt overpowered by Numbers, were obliged to abandon the City; and that M. Botta had retreated towards the Paſs of the Bochetta; from whence he had ſent Orders to all the Imperial Troops, that are in Lombardy, to come and join him immediately: That the Inhabitants of Genoa, finding themſelves Maſters of the City, had vented their Fury on all Sides, and played the Cannon of the Sea Batteries upon all the Ships that were in the Port; by which, among others, a Britiſh Man of War had been much damaged, and forced to cut her Cables, and ſtand out to Sea: And that the armed Peaſants from the Mountains

Mountains had been called into the City to contribute to its Defence. The above-mentioned Letters say farther, that upon the News of this Event, the King of Sardinia had immediately sent his Militia into the Genoese Territory, there to live at Discretion. The Letters from Paris of this Day mention the Surrender of the Fortress of Savona to his Sardinian Majesty. M. de Puisieux, who has been for some Days at Amsterdam, returns from thence directly to Breda. We have Advice that the Island of St. Marguerite was actually taken by one of his Britannick Majesty's Ships, and a Detachment from the Army; and that the Combined Army had taken Possession of Castelane, and Draguignan, at which last Place the Duke of Cruffol would have maintained himself, but he was driven away with great Loss, amounting, as some Letters mention, to above 2000 Men; and upon this M. de Belleisle was retiring towards Toulon.

Hague, Jan. 3, N. S. By Advices from Toulon of the 21st past, we hear that the English Men of War, which were cruizing in the Mediterranean, made themselves Masters of the Island of St. Marguerite, the Fortifications of which they have blown up, and made 140 Men Prisoners.

Rotterdam, Jan. 3, N. S. M. de Puisieux passed through this Town last Saturday in his Way from Utrecht to Breda. By private Letters from Brest we have an Account, that upon the 22d past, no more than seven Ships of War of the late M. D'Anville's Squadron, and 36 Transports, were arrived in the Ports of France; that the French had 1700 Sick; and that they had buried 2800 Soldiers and Sailors in America.
